

Stefanos Tsitsipas Player Profile

Ranked as high as No. 3 at his peak, Greek sensation Stefanos Tsitsipas has consistently placed among the top players in the world. Now at No. 11, there is debate whether he will ever return to his prime — or win a Grand Slam.

Stroke

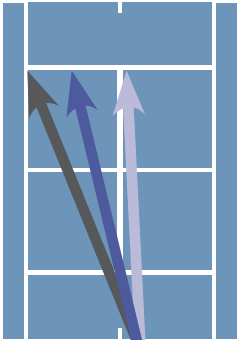

- Backhand DTL Winner: 22%
- Forehand IO Winner: 13.3%
- Forehand DTL Winner: 22.3%

Tsitsipas has the ability to turn points around quickly with his accuracy and tenacity. His down-the-line strokes are emphasized by a one-hand backhand for increased power.

Serve: Deuce

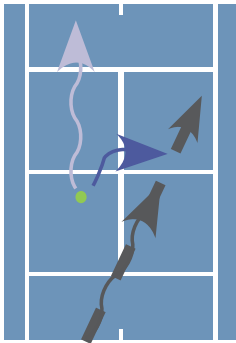

- Wide: 40%
- Body: 20%
- T: 40%

The tendency for most players is to avoid body serves, as those are generally the easiest to return. Tsitsipas stays with this trend, serving as high as 40% out wide and down the T.

Tactics

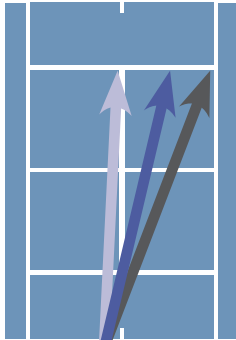

- S&V Winner: 71.4%
- Net Winner: 71.6%
- Dropshot Winner: 31.9%

The soft touch Tsitsipas has allows for solid placement of a dropshot or slice at the net or from the baseline. To top that off, his average first serve speed is 118.6 mph.

Serve: Ad

- Wide: 46%
- Body: 19%
- T: 34%

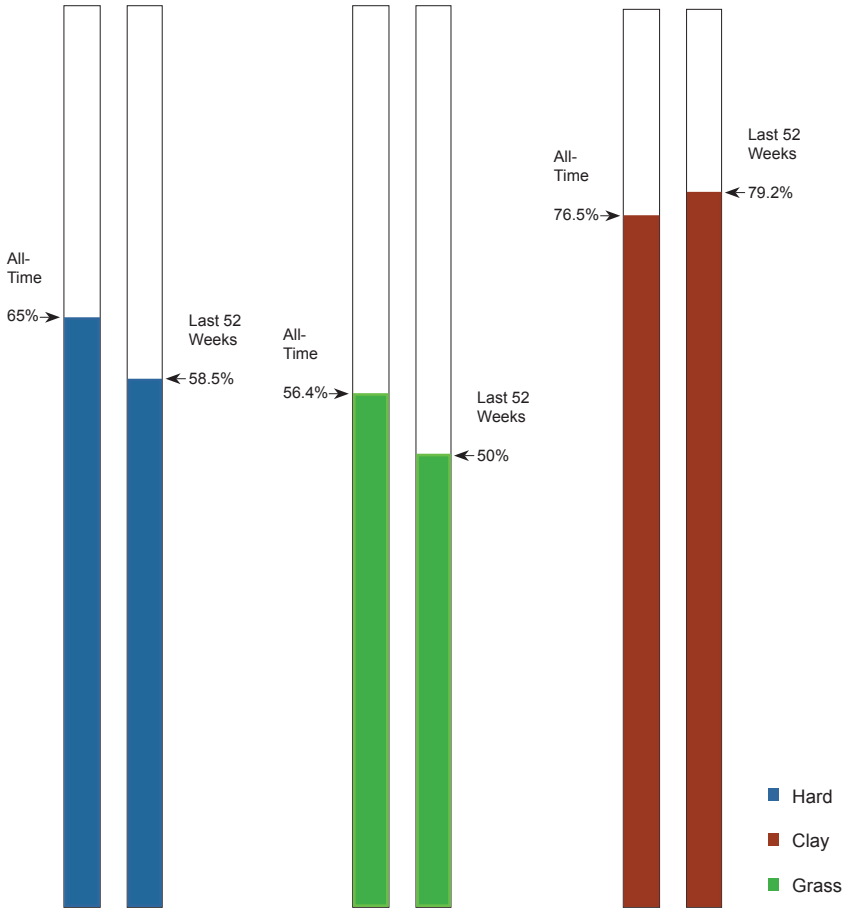

From the ad side, we see more of a dip to body serves. Players try to attack the opponents backhand often, which is why we likely see an ever higher rate out wide for Tsitsipas here.

Win-Loss Percentages

Tsitsipas' has had the most success on clay, followed by hardcourt and grass. His style involves more sliding and slicing, making it great for clay.

Player Comparison

Tsitsipas has more statistical similarity to Djokovic than to the No. 40 player in the world, Tallon Griekspoor. He has a proven ability to attack, but lacks the patience and mindset of Djokovic.
